Situated along the anchorage apron between buildings #811 and #821, this T-shaped office building, built in 1942, is the oldest of the several buildings built from a standard series 700-5201 plan. Like buildings #807, #830, and #844, this "Theatre of Operations," "Temporary" structure also includes an "Alert Building. Addition." The four similar buildings housed the "Operations" of the various bomb squadrons stationed at the base 1942-1945.

Building 819 is the same size as #844, with 3,200 square feet on one floor, built at a cost of $3,800.00 by H & D Company. The building has a concrete foundation and floor and a wood-frame structure with horizontal wood siding. The roofs are gabled with asphalt roll roofing. There are several large roof vents across the roof ridges. The windows have 9 small panes of glass in square bays. The long south section of the building measures 20 feet by 100 feet, while the trunk of the T, projecting to the north, is 20 feet by 60 feet.

Like the other operations buildings, this one has an interior of partitioned rooms, restrooms, space heaters, a "bubbler," and two varieties of light fixtures (fluorescent and incandescent). The building shows evidence of lack of maintenance but appears to be structurally sound.
